DRAMATIC SCENES AS LORIMER IS VOTED OUT

WILLIAM E. LORIMER.

Washington.-In ousting William E. agitation and was able to smile when Lorimer the first case in history is put in record of a man being denied a seat in the United States senate because of charges of bribery in his election. He is not even entitled to be called ex-senator, because the senate of the United States voted that he was never legally elected to that body.

When he walked out of the senate chamber-not out of "yonder door" that he indicated when challenging Senator Kern, but into the Republi-can cloakroom—he left behind bita ever yprivilege of the floor that he has enjoyed. Having thus been de nied membership he will not in future have the right of a former senator to the floor. As a former member of the house, however, he can go and come in that body at will.

Lorimer was ousted by a vote of 55 to 28, the majority being for the resoelection was brought about by corruption and that the seat should be declared vacant.

Leaves Floor After Vote.

Lorimer remained on the floor until the vote was announced. He did not linger long after. His face was flushed and he was exhausted from his three days' speech. His seat is about 12 feet from the swinging doors opening into the Republican cloak room. He arose and strode slowly toward these doors. Senator Smoot of Utah that great state."

As he disappeared behind the doors other senators who had fought for and voted for him crowded into the closk room to commisserate with him and to congratulate him on the splendid fight he had made for his political

No one realized better than Lorimer the great odds he was pitted against and he maintained that composure for which he is noted, carrying out to the last the reputation he has gained of being a good loser. His friends construe the action of the day merely as Lorimer's defeat for election, and are claiming that he will "come back;" that he is in far more comfortable position than those who have fought

The interest in the roll call was in tense. Lorimer showed no signs of Senator Tillman expressed the hope that Mr. Lorimer would consecrate the remainder of his life to the purification of poliites in Chicago and to uplift his fellow citizens in Illinois.

History of Lorimer Case.

For more than two years the fight has been on to oust William Lorimer from his seat in the senate as a representative of the state of Illinois. A constant newspaper agitation, investigations by two senate committees and one committee of the Illinois legislature, millions of words of testimony and scores of speeches have kept the case of Lorimer before the public.

Charges and countercharges of bribery and corruption, crimination and recrimination, indictments, trials and 'confessions" galore have filled the history of the case.

The vote in the senate ended one of the most sensational legislative imbroglios that the country has ever known. It began on April 30, 1910, about a year after the election of Lorimer to the senate, with the publication in the Chicago Tribune of a story by Charles A. White, a member of the Illinois legislature, exposing corruption in that body and charging that White had been bribed to vote for Lorimer for senator.

Lorimer was elected by a combination of Democrats and Republicans in the legislature. Shortly after the publication of the White story, the new senator arose in the snate chamber and demanded an investigation of his election. A senate committee headed by Senator Burrows (Republican, Michigan) took up the task. For nearly four months, September to December, 1910, the committee took testimony at Chicago and Washington, and finally submitted a report exonerating Lorimer. A minority report, however, presented by Senator Beveridge of Indiana, sustained the charges against

After a lengthy debate, in the course of which Lorimer delivered a sensationally brilliant speech defending himself, the majority report was adopted by the senate on March 1, 1911, by a vote of 46 to 40, five not

Meanwhile the case had startled Illinois and the state was ablaze with the developments. Indictment after indictment was found against the members of the legislature which elected Lorimer. White had "confessed" that he was given $1,000 by Representative Lee O'Neil Browne, Democratic leader of the legislature, and $900 by Representative Robert O. Wilson to vote for Lorimer. Browne was indicted for bribery. At his first trial the jury disagreed and at the second trial he was acquitted. Charges of jury bribing in connection with this acquittal were made, but a jury which tried the jury bribery case disagreed. Representatives Wilson and Michael

S. Link were indicted for perjury. The Illinois legislature took up the scandal and the "Helm" investigating committee was appointed, after the United States senate had exonerated Lorimer. While this commission was in session, Clarence S. Funk, general manager of the International Harvester company, testified that he had been asked by Edward Hines, the wealthy lumberman, who had been closely interested in the Lorimer case in the senate, to give $10,000 of a $100,000 fund to help "put Lorimer over at Springfield." This created another sensation and resulted in reopening of the case in the senate. A special committee of eight began a reinvestigation of the case. Once more the sordid stories of alleged bribery and corruption were dragged out, and once more the numerous "confessions" made their appearance. Nearly 160 witnesses were examined

The second committee, headed by Senator Dillingham of Vermont, brought in a majority report again exoncrating Lorimer and a minority report condemning him. Again the debate began, and for months the matter was under discussion.

Throughout the second investigation Senator Lorimer's health failed rapidly. At one time he was kept at his home in Chicago for weeks by his falling neart, and his physician flatly refused to allow him to return "Since I was stricken with paralysis | to Washington.
